Emily Gorrocino joined the MJ team as an assistant account manager in our Benefits Consulting department and was quickly promoted to the position of client executive. Ready for her next challenge, in 2025, Emily was promoted to manager on our client experience team. In her role, Emily collaborates with various teams, including analytics, wellness, compliance, communication, and client advocacy, to deliver exceptional service and strategic guidance

Emily fosters a collaborative, high-performing team culture, providing coaching, mentorship, and professional development to support both individual growth and organizational success. Combining leadership with consultative expertise, she plays a key role in shaping client strategies and elevating the overall client experience.

Prior to joining MJ, Emily worked in the corporate health and wellness field as a health educator and wellness coordinator, where she built relationships with employees to help them improve their health.

In her spare time, you can find Emily trying new fitness classes and cooking. Emily was previously a coach for Girls on the Run and hopes to volunteer with a hospice organization in the future.
