Kailyn Mitchell joined the MJ team as a client advocate in our Benefits Consulting department. In her role, Kailyn works closely with clients and consultants to support the day-to-day execution of employee benefits strategies, ensuring that clients receive a seamless and attentive experience. Her work sits at the intersection of service and strategy; keeping communications clear, processes on track, and clients feeling well taken care of.

Before joining MJ, Kailyn built a strong foundation in client service and community outreach through her work at a regional nonprofit blood center, where she contributed to donor engagement initiatives, coordinated cross-departmental projects, and helped develop programs designed to drive meaningful participation. She also served as president of a campus nonprofit focused on bone marrow donor recruitment, leading fundraising events and building partnerships across the university community. That combination of operational awareness and people-first thinking is what she brings to her clients at MJ.

Outside of MJ, Kailyn can be found running, biking, or playing pickleball, and when she's not staying active, you can usually find her looking for new ice cream flavors to try around town.
